BEAUTIFUL FLAG DAY EXERCISES

With the impressive ritual of the order forming a part of the program, Ogden lodge, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, No. 719, celebrated the anniversary of Flag day in the lodge rooms last night. About seventy-five visitors, including members of Dix-Logan post of the G. A. R., the Ladies' Auxiliary and Spanish War Veterans, were in attendance, in addition to a good representation from the membership of the lodge.

Lodge Decorated.
The lodge room was appropriately decorated with the national colors, which were gracefully draped from the rafters of the four elk heads on each side of the hall, while another flag formed a canopy over the stand of the exalted ruler at the end of the hall.

One of the features of the celebration, in which the officers of the lodge participated, was the construction of a mammoth liberty bell in front of the exalted ruler's station, representing the three colors of the national standard.

the chief address of the evening. His remarks dealt with the birth and history of the American flag, which the speaker proved was older than the colors of England, France, Germany or Spain. In an eloquent manner he launched into the present political status of the nation, predicting that many of those assembled to pay tribute to "Old Glory" will live to witness a great revolution by which a government by a few will be changed to a government by which every man will have a voice, resulting in a cleaner and less despotic republic.

The following was the program:
Music, "Star-Spangled Banner," Prof. Squire Coop.
Introductory exercises, exalted ruler and officers.
Prayer, chaplain.
"Flag Record," Brother W. W. Fleetwood.
Song, "The Flag Without a Stain." Altar service, exalted ruler and officers.
Song, old, officers and members.

Patriotic address, Brother Elmer I. Goshen.
Song, "America," all joining.

THEY OPPOSE THE STRIKE

Editor Standard:—Just at present the local building industry is demoralized by a strike, called by the Carpenters' union, and buildings of all classes in course of erection are practically at a standstill. The injustice of this to the owner, in other words the man who pays the bills, is at once apparent, for he is very much inconvenienced, if not out of pocket, in case of residential work, and he is actually forced to lose money through deferred rents, etc., if the work be of a commercial character.

Right now seems to us an ill-advised time to bring on a strike, being in the midst of the building season, and contractors having work under way which they figured on early in the year, and which will in many cases result in direct loss to them if they are forced to pay the increase now. If mechanics feel that they should have a higher wage, how much better it would be for them to adjust their differences at the first of the year before the season's work had gotten under way.

But regarding this wage question, which is, after all, the nucleus of the whole difficulty, is it really a just demand? Mechanics claim that owing to the present high cost of living they cannot exist on $4 a day, which is the equivalent of $104 a month. After a quiet little strike on our part, it has proved surprising to learn just what percentage of professional men, who have spent at least several hundreds of dollars and some years of their time in fitting themselves for a vocation, really average as much after paying office rent and expenses incidental to their work, to say nothing of the responsibility they are required to shoulder.

We firmly believe that striking is by no means the most effective way of adjusting the wage scale, for the reason that it affords too much advantage to the unworthy and it hinders building, thus putting a damper on an industry that means so much to our community. Already several fine building prospects in Ogden have been given up owing to the unsettled condition of labor. Building is very high as it is, and one of the architect's hardest problems is to keep his client's ideas regarding his building within the means at hand. The architect comes in direct contact with all of the mechanics and tradesmen whose work enters into the construction and finishing of a building, and he must make provision for all that goes into that building, but for all ordinary work he is too often forced to substitute something inferior to his original conception of his design because of being hampered by insufficient means.

We have no grievance against the union; in fact, we believe it to be the proper thing if properly handled, but it is abusing a good principle, the principle of co-operation, when men form a league to increase the wage of a certain class of mechanics generally, making no distinction between deserving and undeserving ones; for how many of our carpenters are really worth $4.50 a day? It might be argued that they are required to learn their trade thoroughly before they are accepted by the union; but the truth of the matter is that a large percentage of them are not worth a cent over $2.50 a day, and an architect is in a pretty good position to judge of the merits of work done by different men. If a man can really earn $4.50 or $5 a day, or even $6, pay it to him, for he will do twice the work of an inexperienced man, and do it better, but to force the building public to pay a man who has been doing carpenter work less than six months the same money that the skilled mechanic draws, is to our point manifestly unjust.

Therefore, it seems to us that instead of calling a strike with all its resultant disadvantages, it would be much better and certainly fairer to grade the men in the union and pay them as much as they are capable of earning, and with the scarcity of first-class mechanics which is prevalent generally, contractors would be glad to pay $4.50 or even $5 a day for a man if he could earn the money.

NEW PLAYERS IN BASEBALL

(By Dudley Porter)
It will be no professional baseball career for John Templeton, the Williams college pitcher and captain, after he is graduated from the college this month. Templeton has received a number of flattering offers from the big leagues but he has turned them all down. The New York Americans, it is said, offered him $5,000 if he would join them. The New York Nationals, the Detroit Americans and Washington teams are all said to have made him collection nice offers. Templeton is a man of independent means and merely took up baseball as sport and for recreation. He never had any intention of playing the game seriously after he left school.

Walter Salin, formerly of the Louisville team in the American association, has joined the Fort Worth aggregation in the Texas league.
"Red" Kelly, captain of the Notre Dame "Indiana" University baseball team this season, has signed with the Chicago Americans, and will soon join the team. Kelly will return to Notre Dame next year to finish his course in law and will coach the team.

"Red" Murray of the New York Giants, was formerly a Notre Dame student and baseball player.

Infielder Thomas McMillan has been purchased from the Brooklyn National league team by Cincinnati. The price paid is said to have been $1,500.

The Chicago National league club has released Pitcher Conkley to the Louisville team.

Columbus, Ohio, has sold Catcher Tony James to the Kansas City club. Walvers were asked on James and Kansas City refused to waive, getting the catcher at the waiver-price—$750.

SALT LAKE AND STATE NEWS

VETERANS HONOR THE OLD FLAG

Salt Lake, June 15.—As guests of the Sons of Veterans and the auxiliary, Daughters of Veterans, and the Relief corps and circles, members of the local G. A. R. posts celebrated Flag Day at Wandanere Tuesday. The old soldiers spent the most of the day at the resort, renewing old acquaintances, talking over the old days and having a general reunion in patriotism. Because the day is one that calls forth patriotic thoughts and sentiments, the veterans and the old ladies—and the young ones—spent the day in an environment of patriotism.

A luncheon was served by the ladies in the evening in the pavilion under the dance hall. There was everything served that the season affords, the supply was abundant, and ample justice was done to the good things provided.

Following this, a brief program was carried out in the dance hall. The hall is not suitable for such exercises, both speaking and singing is difficult, and the hundreds who crowded around the "suspended stand" had to remain standing. This program was carried through under the direction of H. E. Dewey, commander of the Sons of Veterans, who recently succeeded P. E. Connor.

Weber Talks Patriotism.

Judge A. J. Weber was the orator of the occasion, and, while he spoke briefly, was eloquent. He said he was much pleased to see that Governor Spry had issued a proclamation calling attention to Flag day and he regretted that the managers of the resort had not read the proclamation. "I should judge they did not," said he, "from the lack of flags in their hall today. It is a beautiful day and a beautiful custom, and it was fitting that the chief executive of the state should issue that proclamation and that once a year Old Glory should be swung to the breeze everywhere. It was 133 years ago, on June 14, that that flag was born. It was the good old flag that represents the best people of the best government on earth. Along in the latter part of May, Washington sent his rough sketch of the flag to Mrs. Elizabeth Ross, and in a few days Mrs. Ross made the first American flag."

What Flag Represents.

After giving a brief history of the flag, Judge Weber said they still had the thirteen stripes, but in addition they had forty-six stars, indicating forty-six indestructible states in an indissoluble union. While the United States was one of the youngest nations on earth, he asked them if they ever stopped to think that it was the oldest flag on earth. It has gone through more battles, with more credit and glory, than any other flag "neath the skies. It represented the history of the country. It represented the ideas of Washington, of Jefferson and of Jackson. It represented the martyrdom of Lincoln and Garfield and the heroism of Grant, Sherman and Connor. It represented obedience to the laws of the government; it represented the great principles given to the world when the declaration of independence was written by Thomas Jefferson. It represented equality before the law. It represented the idea that government only derived its first powers from the consent of the people. "And that flag," continued the speaker, "represents a greater idea or principle than all these mentioned, and that is absolute liberty to the individual so long as he does not infringe upon the liberty and rights of any one else." In closing, Judge Weber enjoined his hearers to keep the faith with the flag and the flag would protect them.

CONVICT ESCAPES FROM COUNTY JAIL

SALT LAKE, June 14.—Joe Davis, a prisoner at the county jail, who was being kept for the alleged holding-up of a street car at the end of the Fourth North street car line on the night of April 20, escaped from the county jail some time between 5 o'clock Monday afternoon and 8 o'clock last night.

Davis made his escape by slipping from the dining room into the basement and then creeping through the air shaft to the attic, after which he piled enough bricks from around a door to allow the partial opening of the door. Through this he reached the roof of the sheriff's residence and then climbed down by the porch to the ground.

Part of the time the man was at work there were four deputy sheriffs in the jail.
The plumbing which connects with the other prisoners at 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon. As is usual after each of the prisoners went into the dining room to the west inside corridor for exercise, Davis evidently hid under one of the tables in the dining room and as soon as Jailor Muller went into the office escaped into the cellar. From this a big air shaft runs to the attic, containing the plumbing which connects with the cells in the rotatory. In the attic Davis found a part of a bar with which he went to work on the bricks around the door. The sheriff's family moved to the new residence yesterday and Davis had little fear of any one hearing him once he reached the roof.

At least a part of the time that he must have been at work Deputy Smith, Eddington and Emery were in the jail office.
The first intimation that the sheriff had that anyone was gone was when a "trusty" sent for him and told him that a prisoner had made his escape since supper time. The sheriff went at once to the attic, but Davis was gone. Officers were sent in every direction, but up to the morning no trace had been found of Davis.

On the night of April 20 as a car was standing at the end of the Fourth North line a man with a rifle in his hand entered the car and told the two or three passengers aboard to throw up their hands. He then ordered the conductor to take off his cap and pass it around, at the same
